NEW QUESTION: 2

DRAG DROP

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

Lambda architecture is a data-processing architecture designed to handle massive quantities of data by taking advantage of both batch- and stream-processing methods. This approach to architecture attempts to balance latency, throughput, and fault-tolerance by using batch processing to provide comprehensive and accurate views of batch data, while simultaneously using real-time stream processing to provide views of online data. The two view outputs may be joined before presentation

Box 1: Speed The speed layer processes data streams in real time and without the requirements of fix-ups or completeness. This layer sacrifices throughput as it aims to minimize latency by providing real-time views into the most recent data.

Box 2: Batch

The batch layer precomputes results using a distributed processing system that can handle very large quantities of data. The batch layer aims at perfect accuracy by being able to process all available data when generating views.

Box 3: Serving

Output from the batch and speed layers are stored in the serving layer, which responds to ad-hoc queries by returning precomputed views or building views from the processed data.

NEW QUESTION: 3

Which of the following is a characteristic of the speed layer in Lambda architecture?

- A. It processes data in real time and without the requirements of fix-ups or completeness.
- B. It sacrifices throughput to minimize latency by providing real-time views into the most recent data.
- C. It precomputes results using a distributed processing system that can handle very large quantities of data.
- D. It aims at perfect accuracy by being able to process all available data when generating views.
