Explanation:

B: The Console Context Path is an advance configuration option. The context path that you want to use in URLs that specify the Administration Console.

Note: Create a new WebLogic Server domain based on a template. Templates allow you to re-create an existing domain for use in another context, such as migrating a domain containing an application under development to a production environment.

C: An Administration Console extension is a WAR file that contains the resources for a section of a WebLogic Portal Web application. When you deploy the extension, the Administration Console creates an in-memory union of the files and directories in its WAR file with the files and directories in the extension WAR file. Once the extension has been deployed, it is a full member of the Administration Console: it is secured by the WebLogic Server security realm, it can navigate to other sections of the Administration Console, and if the extension modifies WebLogic Server resources, it participates in the change control process.
