III). Cash conversion cycle + Accounts payable period.
IV). Inventory period - Accounts receivable period - Accounts payable period.
- A. II and III.
 - B. I and II.
 - C. II, III, and IV.

Answer: A

Explanation:

cash conversion cycle = Accounts receivable period + Inventory period - Accounts payable period

NEW QUESTION: 2

An Exadata storage server physical disk on an X5 high-capacity full rack entered the predictive failure state.

Identify the two steps that you must perform to replace this failed physical disk.

- A. Identify the griddisks located on the failed physical disk and drop them from the associated ASM diskgroups.
- B. Replace the failed physical disk.
- C. Create a new celldisk and new griddisks on the replaced physical disk.
- D. Verify that the griddisks located on the physical disk have been successfully dropped from the associated ASM diskgroups.
- E. Add the griddisks back into the ASM diskgroup they used to be a member of.

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

You may need to replace a physical disk because the disk is in warning - predictive failure status. The predictive failure status indicates that the physical disk will soon fail, and should be replaced at the earliest opportunity. The Oracle ASM disks associated with the grid disks on the physical drive are automatically dropped, and an Oracle ASM rebalance relocates the data from the predictively failed disk to other disks.

Note: After the physical disk is replaced, the grid disks and cell disks that existed on the previous disk in that slot are re-created on the new physical disk. If those grid disks were part of an Oracle ASM group, then they are added back to the disk group, and the data is rebalanced on them, based on the disk group redundancy and ASM_POWER_LIMIT parameter.

NEW QUESTION: 3

You work as an Office Assistant for TechWorld Inc. You use Microsoft Word 2010 for creating documents. You have recently created a document. You want to turn on the navigation pane so that you can navigate, search, and manipulate the structure and organization of headings. You have opened the open view menu to turn on the navigation pane. Mark the option/button on which you will click to turn on the navigation pane.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

The navigation pane is one of the new pieces of functionality in Word 2010. This pane comprises a set of features related to navigation, search, and manipulation of the structure and organization of headings. This navigation pane replaces and improvises the old "Document Map" and "Thumbnails" panes. In order to turn on the navigation pane, click the View menu, in the Show group click the Navigation Pane check box.

NEW QUESTION: 4

Which two elements are valid in the BGP path selection algorithm? (Choose two.)

- A. highest local preference value
- B. highest multi-exit discriminator
- C. lowest multi-exit discriminator
- D. lowest local preference value

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

When a Junos device receives two similar route advertisements from different BGP peers, it will select the route with the lowest MED value. BGP route selection proceeds in this manner:
Prefer the highest local-preference value

Prefer the shortest AS-path length

Prefer the lowest origin value

Prefer the lowest MED value

Prefer routes learned from an EBGP peer over an IBGP peer

Prefer best exit from AS

For EBGP-receive routes, prefer the current active route:

otherwise, prefer routes from the peer with the lowest RID

Prefer paths with the shortest cluster length

Prefer routes from the peer with the lowest peer ID
