NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following refers to the measurement of the relationship between the characteristics of each employee and his actual performance in the position?

- A. Construct validity
- B. Content validity
- C. Concurrent validity
- D. Criterion validity

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation: Construct validity is the measurement of the relationship between the characteristics of each employee and his actual performance in the position. Criterion validity results when a certain criterion (or work trait) is predicted and then results. Concurrent validity is a type of criterion validity (along with predictive validity). Content validity is simply a test that measures whether or not a candidate is qualified to complete an important part of the job. A simple example might be an audition for a dance company; the job description requires the dancers to perform in the company, so the construct validity starts by measuring whether or not those at the audition have acceptable dance training.
